Pathetic Story of Love Betrayed Wrung from Lips of Woman Who Killed Ex-Senator Brown as She Struggles in Agony Before Court.

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 19.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In the face of Mobile's threat to secede from Alabama, by a vote of 32 to 2 the Senate today passed the House bill calling for general prohibition in Alabama after January 1, 1908.

The enthusiasm was great at all times while the bill was up for passage, and the Senators favoring the measure were cheered lustily.

When the bill was called up, Senator Hamberger, from the Mobile district, read a telegram he had just received from M. J. McDermott, president of the Bank of Mobile and head of the "Home Rulers" of that city. It was as follows:

"Unless Anti-Prohibitionists win today, please give notice that Mobile is prepared to secede from the State of Alabama, and cease to be dominated by its county cousins, whose efforts to paralyze Mobile will not be tolerated."

WOMEN IN THE FIGHT.

The Senator's words were heard in silence, and the vote proceeded.

The resistance to the measure by the Mobile people arose from the fact that the schools of that city are supported mainly by the saloon houses, and some of these houses are well known.

BANKERS ARE INDICTED.

Grand Jury Returns Bills Against Several of Closed Institutions in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In line with the quick action methods of the District Attorney's office in Brooklyn, the investigation of the closed banks in that borough by the grand jury has proceeded to the point of indictments against at least four and probably seven men.

The names of these men will not be made public until the indictments are handed over in the County Court, Thursday and Friday mornings.

Grand larceny will be the charge contained in several of the indictments, and the amounts in each charge will run higher than $25,000. Other indictments will accuse the men named in the papers with forgeries in one of the three degrees.

There are confessions signed by all of the men under investigation. These confessions were made to the directors after the bank closed its doors, and it is believed they will be used in the grand jury investigation. These incriminating documents were turned over to Clark Williams, Superintendent of Banks, and he passed them to Atty.-Gen. Jackson.

MAN SUFFERS RELAPSE.

Complications Appear as Result of Injury.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 19.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An attempt to assassinate Emperor Nicholas was made today, but it failed because the woman selected by the terrorist to accomplish the fatal mission lost her courage and drank poison almost on the threshold of the Emperor's palace.

She was found dying, but she was able and willing to confess her plans. She told the secret-service officers that a plot, existed against the Emperor's life, and that she had been chosen to execute it.

The woman, whose name was Xenia, died after having made a confession to a priest. Important documents found on her person indicate that she had been detailed to kill the Minister of War, Lieut.-Gen. Rudiger, who has been formally sentenced to death by the social revolutionists.

The woman was only 18 years old. She was well dressed and rather handsome. Although she frankly admitted her purpose and revealed the existence of the plot, she steadfastly refused to say who she was or whence she came.

EXPECT IMPORTANT CAPTURES.

Acting information she gave about the plot, the secret police are planning important captures. It is said, standing guard outside the palace authorities.

The woman, who belonged to the Social Revolutionary party, said she was given a bomb by the terrorist organization, and she dropped it from a bridge into the River Neva before she poisoned herself.

The attempt on the Emperor's life was made at Tsarskoe Selo, sixteen miles from the capital. The young woman, who was to inflict the fatal wound, in accordance with the plot of the terrorists, was found helpless at the railway station at Tsarskoe Selo.

TELLS OF PLOT.

At first it was thought she had been injured. When questioned, however, she said that she had swallowed poison rather than kill the Emperor. She had wanted to slay him, but at the last moment her courage failed, and she could not commit the deed.

In the woman's pockets were found a dagger, a machine pistol and a deadly bomb.

The girl was hurried to a hospital, and secret police agents there questioned her, while physicians tried to save her life. She presents the appearance of belonging to Russia's best society, if not to the nobility itself.

PREVIOUS ATTEMPT MADE.

This attempt at murder is the second within about a month. It is constructed to indicate that the terrorists are determined to the Emperor's life.

Emperor Nicholas left Peterhof for Tsarskoe Selo November 9, intending to pass the winter there. What was believed to have been a carefully laid plot of assassinate him then was frustrated by the vigilance of the railway guards, while the imperial party was on the way to Tsarskoe Selo.

Early in the morning of November 9 a guard discovered six men trying to cut the wire of a semaphore signal at Ligovo Station, at the junction of the railroads to Peterhof and Tsarskoe Selo.

The guard attempted to arrest the men, but he was fired on and wounded, and the supposed terrorists escaped.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With hundreds of eyes leveled at her, and the son of the man she murdered gazing steadily into her face, Mrs. Arthur Bradley, this morning took the witness stand in her own defense for the murder of ex-Senator Arthur Brown of Utah in the Utah Hotel last December.

The day after the most sensational session since the trial opened, the courtroom was stormed by an eager crowd of men and women anxious to get inside the courtroom.

Mrs. Bradley rose almost willingly when the bailiff called her name. She took the oath and mounted the two steps leading to the witness chair, but when she turned and faced the curious crowd in the courtroom, her face turned deathly white and she seemed about to faint.

Except a court officer, and as Mrs. Bradley gave her full name in answer to a question it was impossible for even him to hear what the defendant said.

For nearly two hours the court stenographers were compelled to report Mrs. Bradley's answers. It seemed impossible for her to gather the needed strength to make her answers heard. When the court adjourned at 2 o'clock this afternoon, by careful and steady questioning, Judge Powers, chief counsel for Mrs. Bradley, had directed her through the entire course of her love affair with Brown from the time she met him in the spring of 1892 until the end of November, 1906, a few days before he started on the journey to Washington that ended in his death.

PITIFUL STORY.

It was a pitiful story that Mrs. Bradley told, a story showing a devotion that forced the woman to give up family, home and friends for the man who constantly promised to make her his wife, who professed undying affection and devotion to her, telling her that she was "the only bright spot in his life," who dragged her through the mire and forced her name upon the lips of every man in Salt Lake City.

Mrs. Bradley told it all, weeping, shrillingly, and at times on the verge of physical collapse. Her voice was so low and so plaintive that even when her words could not be understood those in the courtroom knew it was telling of a tragedy.

She told everything. She retraced every step in her memory of her life and love with Arthur Brown; she omitted none of the details of her sin, none of the sufferings her mistake had brought her, and none of the joy which had come into her life with the love of the man.

She told how she had tried to avoid him and how he had persisted in seeing her. As she detailed the incidents of her life with Brown, and frequently when a question was asked that laid bare many of the most intimate occurrences of those years, Mrs. Bradley would shake her head in absolute grief, wipe her hands and say: "Oh, I cannot, I cannot."

But always the question would be repeated, and she would be compelled to answer. Her entire story was punctuated with evidences of mental suffering, and frequently her distress would become so keen that she would be overcome, or just sit in the witness chair and sob pitifully.

When Brown's name was first mentioned, Mrs. Bradley broke down completely. Nearly every member of the jury showed the effect of Mrs. Bradley's testimony upon them. They could not keep back the tears, as she sobbed out her pathetic story.

WORN OUT.

"I am so tired," said Mrs. Bradley a few minutes before 3 o'clock today, after she had spent about four hours on the witness stand. Judge Stanford immediately gave orders for the adjournment of court. The events directly connected with the tragedy in which Brown was killed had not been reached, but had been very closely approached, and they will be the subject of the first testimony to be given tomorrow.

Mrs. Bradley gave today the particulars of many pledges made to her; told how Brown had introduced her as his wife, and of how he had given his name to one of their children, and also of how he had aided her in no less than three criminal operations. She related many pleasant incidents of their life together. She wore a smile when she spoke of her pride in his intellectual attainments and told of their reading together the principal poets.

The courtroom was crowded during the entire day and many of the spectators were women. Tears were frequently shed, not only by the audience

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Before leaving Windsor Castle yesterday, for High Cliffe Castle, Kaiser Wilhelm left no less a sum than $10,000 to be divided as tips among the servants at the castle, the gamekeepers and the stable attendants.

On his previous visit to Windsor in 1904, the imperial tip was only $2500.

MRS. GOULD'S MOTION DENIED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The motion of counsel for Katherine Clemons Gould to vacate an order obtained by her husband, Howard Gould, for the examination of Helen Mer before the trial of Mrs. Gould's suit for separation from her husband, was denied today by Judge Gordon.

THE ladies of the State had assembled here to fight for the measure, as it had been rumored that there would not be sufficient Senators favoring its passage to secure the two-thirds vote required under the constitution, as the Governor had not included it in his extra session call.

FAIR LOBBYISTS.

Every Senator was met by a delegation of women and citizens as he came into the Capitol. White ribbons and white streamers and white flowers were pinned upon his coat. Attached to the flowers were printed verses from the Bible. On the streamers were printed, "Prayer for Alabama." Little school girls were in the lobby, pleading with the Senators. Women in all walks of life, some of the wealthiest to the poorest families, were there, intermingling and urging the Senators to pass the bill.

There was only one delegation, and that from Mobile, which was opposed to the measure. This delegation was received coldly by the Prohibitionists. They came here to plead with the Senators to give them till 1910 to get their school system straightened out.

COMPROMISE PLAN ADOPTED.

The Prohibitionists would not hear of it, but they compromised by extending the time from October 1, 1908, to January 1, 1909, when the saloon must go out of business.

The women from Mobile who opposed the bill when they arrived at the Capitol, found that the Prohibitionists had taken all the seats and they were forced to remain in the rear, standing, impossible to see what was going on, and could hardly hear the speeches and their cheers were drowned by the applause of the Prohibitionists.

No such scene has ever before been seen like this, with the exception during the time of the Confederate Congress, which was held in the same hall, Birmingham, the principal city in Alabama, has already voted whiskey out on January 1, 1909, and this bill does not affect that city.

This bill runs every saloon and distillery out of business. It means the shutting down of many large breweries in the State and much loss of revenue to the State, counties and cities.

VERY DRY WAVE.

The prohibition wave has swept the State like wildfire, and there was nothing left for the Legislature to do but pass the bill. Gov. Comer stated to The Times correspondent tonight that he would sign the bill. The amendment changing the date as to when it should go into operation will have to be passed by the House.

Speaker Carmichael, the author of the bill, states that the amendment is agreeable to the friends of the measure in the House, and that it will be signed by the Governor.

After the bill passed, the women began to sing, "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow," and as the chorus from hundreds of throats rose up, the legislators uncovered their heads and joined in the singing.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 19.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Novos Vremya" publishes an editorial article today in which it declares that Secretary of War Taft, as well as all Americans, are sure of a most cordial welcome throughout Russia.

The traditional friendship of Russia for the grandest of modern democracies, the paper continues, does not waver in spite of the attitude taken by the United States during the Russo-Japanese war. By misplacing her sympathies at this time America has mainly herself, and created a most doubtful rival.

The natural impulse of Russia would be to meet America half way in the matter of combinations affecting the Pacific under the condition that each country share equally in the profit.

Full speed was then resumed.

The reduced speed resulted in a loss of seventeen miles. The passengers generally were not aware of the speed reduction. The seas were so heavy that the spare anchor had to be secured with extra lashings.

The run to noon yesterday, Monday, was 571 miles.

COMMITTEES FIND FAULT WITH BILLS.

Resignation of Railroad Commissioner Wilson Followed by Appearance of New Obstacle to Speedy Work by Legislature.

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.)

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 10.—With the possible impeachment and trial of Railroad Commissioner Andrew M. Wilson obviated by the receipt of his resignation and its acceptance by the Governor today, it was believed that the Legislature would find time to work for which it was called by Thursday night or Friday at the latest, but a serious obstacle to the rapid working of the legislative machinery was encountered this afternoon when the bills drafted to enable the courts to resume duty during the special holiday period, and the measure for extending the time for the payment of taxes, reached the respective judiciary committees of the two houses.

Much discussion was expressed in the committees of both houses, not with the object of the measures, but with their present form. Strong opposition developed, and it was impossible to reach an agreement.

The main point at issue on the tax-delinquency bill was whether the Legislature should extend the time for payment for a flat period of days or make it as the bill is drawn, not exceeding thirty days at one time, but conferring power upon the Governor to declare, at his discretion, three periods of thirty days each, and not to exceed ninety days in one fiscal year.

In the Judiciary Committee of the Assembly the bill was sharply attacked, its constitutionality was questioned, and an issue was raised whether the bill was not delegating a legislative function upon the executive, in permitting the executive, at his discretion, to declare when taxes shall be paid.

Gov. Gillett, in response to a message from the Senate Committee, appeared at the meeting and favored the bill as drawn. He said it would be impossible to set a definite time when the Legislature shall have passed to permit the withdrawal of money from the banks. In the course of the discussion the Governor said:

"I have no sympathy with the banks. The people have been surprisingly patient. It is not for me to legislate, but particularly want to legislate, but for the depositors. If you extend the time for the payment of taxes for thirty days, as the Los Angeles people would have it, what is to hinder the banks from carrying on, have your money, and what are you going to do about it? and they may be in a flourishing condition at the time, any stringency having passed."

The Governor and Senator Curtin, author of three Senate bills on the holiday question, had a lively tilt over the bill introduced by the latter. Gov. Gillett contended that Senator Curtin's bill would allow action taken against any bank that is now insolvent, but which, if given time, might be able to right itself. No agreement could be reached and the Senate Judiciary Committee appointed two subcommittees, one composed of Senators Willis, Curtis, Keene, Anthony, Carter and Brown, to discuss the various holiday bills and the other composed of Senators Curtin, Wright, Wolfe, Willis and McGowan, to take up the suspension of the tax-delinquency bill. Both committees are to report to the Senate committee tomorrow.

TROUBLE IN ASSEMBLY.

In the Judiciary Committee of the Assembly the holiday bills also proved unsatisfactory in their present form. It was contended that the measures connected with the Constitution, which provides that "Courts shall always be open, legal holidays and non-judicial days excepted." It also was maintained that the bills as drawn did not prevent the issue and serving of attachments upon banks during special holidays.

The banking interests of the State came to for sharp criticism in not having taken sufficient interest in the special legislation, intended, in part, at least, for their protection. It was formulated bills or have attorneys representing them at the Legislature.

It was finally decided to call Gov. Gillett, Atty.-Gen. Webb, E. C. Cooper, private secretary to the Governor, L. H. Hatfield, Secretary of the Senate, and the members of the Senate Chamber of Commerce and Banks, to meet the committee at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and send telegrams requesting Homer S. King, president of the San Francisco clearinghouse, I. W. Hollister, president of the Union Trust Company, and Everett J. Brown, District Attorney of Oakland, to appear before the committee at the same time, that the committee might learn their views. Attorneys representing banking interests throughout the State were also invited.

As this will mean at least one day's delay in the working of the Legislature, it is apparent that the action of committees, nothing can be done in either house, it is possible that the session may extend over until next week.

Just before adjournment of the afternoon session of the Senate, Senator Marc Anthony arose to a question of personal privilege, arraigned and denounced Martin Kelly, a member of the House of Representatives, in scathing terms, designated him as an "unrepentant felon," "treacherous and degraded," who never fought for his country, who had dragged down to slavery almost every person whom he had dealt with, and asked that he be excluded from the lobby of the Senate. No notice was taken of Anthony's attack by the Senate.

FIRST DAY'S WORK.

Formal reorganization, the reading of Gov. Gillett's message and the introduction of the special legislation for which the call was issued comprised the first day's work of the Legislature, which convened in extra session today.

With all but five of the forty Senators in their seats, one or two more arriving in the afternoon, the upper house held two brief sessions, while the Assembly, with seventy-five members present, held a short session in the morning, and then adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The companion bills to the measures introduced in the lower house and the morning for the rehabilitation of courts during special holidays, the extension of time for the payment of taxes during periods of financial stringency, providing for the payment of the expenses of Adj.-Gen. J. B. Laucke incurred during the street strike in San Francisco last spring, and amending the Idaho Creek bill for a bond issue for a tidal basin and harbor improvements at San Francisco were not introduced in the Senate until 11 o'clock in the afternoon. The current resolution was also introduced in the upper house approving four amendments to the charter of San Francisco.

Gov. Gillett was non-committal, and took the matter under advisement, but in an interview later seemed adverse to calling another session.

"I included in the call the amend-

Following a separate caucus of the Republican members of the two houses, the work of reorganization was quickly effected. The Senate limited the per-diem expenses of attaches to $149.50, and the Assembly to $145 a day. An unusual spirit of economy seemed to pervade the legislative halls, the members of the upper house even decided in caucus not to avail themselves of their constitutional right to draw $25

for contingent expenses, which is allowed each Senator.

THREE CENTRAL FIGURES IN THE BRADLEY CASE.

Women See Him in Different Lights.

Mrs. Bradley, on trial for slaying ex-Senator Brown of Utah, declares he deceived, terrified and abused her, driving her to a state of distraction. Mrs. Adams, who was betrothed to him when he was killed, maintains her faith in his honor and integrity, despite Mrs. Bradley's accusations. Many bogus pictures of the women in the case have been published. The above are their real likenesses.

but once or twice by members of the jury.

Her attorneys expressed confidence after the witness left the stand, that Mrs. Bradley would be able to proceed to the end without breaking down. Mrs. Bradley said her health had failed during her association with Brown, and she told of one occasion when she was tempted to commit suicide.

MRS. BRADLEY'S OWN STORY OF WRONGS.

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Annie Bradley, on trial for the killing of former Senator Brown of Utah, took the witness stand today in her own behalf, and her assumption of that position marked the climax of the already famous case.

The fact that her story was to be heard under oath had become generally known and the courtroom, of limited capacity at best, was crowded long before the morning of the trial, for in addition to the crowd of "regulars" in attendance, there were many whose faces are unfamiliar in court, and these included a much larger percentage of women than has heretofore been seen here.

Much interest was manifested when the prisoner entered the court a few minutes before 10 o'clock. She was much agitated and seemed almost devoid of courage and strength as she took her customary seat. Fortunately for her, she was not the first witness called and she was given time to compose herself while Mrs. Josephine Tighe, a local newspaper editor, related the particulars of a call on Mrs. Bradley in the house of detention on December 18, when Mrs. Adams also made a call. The witness said that when she arrived Mrs. Bradley was lying on a cot, apparently asleep and she did not arouse until Mrs. Adams was announced.

"Then she suddenly sprang up," said the witness, "and said she would see me immediately. At first her eyes had a dead, fishy appearance, but when the witness was announced she became excited and her eyes were bright."

"She said Mrs. Bradley nervously clutched the bed clothes, and then she indicated consideration, the witness said she had reached the conclusion that Mrs. Bradley was innocent. It was 10:12 o'clock when Mrs. Bradley was called and she immediately faced the jury and the audience."

CALLS MRS. BRADLEY.

"I call Mrs. Annie Adams," said Judge Powers, and the interest was intensified. He immediately corrected his mistake, announcing that he meant Mrs. Annie Bradley. Then the interest took another phase of intensity. By the time the first question had been put to the witness, had gathered herself together and her nervousness had well-nigh left her.

Her voice was low and indistinct, but the tone was firm, so that while the stenographer was at first compelled to repeat her responses to the jury, she soon regained sufficient confidence and strength of voice to enable her to be heard by giving careful attention. Judge Powers asked the questions and they were at first directed to developing the history of the defendant who said she was 23 years old; that she was born in Kansas City and educated in Denver; that she had had smallpox and pneumonia, and had been badly hurt by a blow on the head while a child. She went to Salt Lake City in 1928, she said, and she lived there ever since. She occupied a clerical position in the Salt Lake Waterworks for three years and eight months.

"Were you ever married?"

"Yes, sir, I was married to Clarence Bradley a week after I left the waterworks."

"Two children, a boy and a girl, resulted from this union, she said. She had joined the Salt Lake Women's Club, a literary organization, which gave much attention to civic reform, very soon after her wedding and later became secretary of the club. She also became a member of the Woman's Press Club and the Post's Round Table.

It was through her connection with these and political organizations that she became acquainted with Senator Brown. When Judge Powers undertook to develop Mrs. Bradley's connection with politics, Dist. Atty. Baker entered a protest and the lawyers on both sides repaired to the judge's desk with the purpose of settling the point by a quiet conference. The consultation evidently resulted in a victory for the defense, as Judge Powers was permitted to develop the fact that Mrs. Bradley had taken an active part in political affairs in Utah, where women vote.

WITNESS IN TEARS.

"Were your relations with your husband happy or unhappy?"

"Unhappy," was the reply, spoken in a low tone.

She was divorced from Mr. Bradley in 1920.

The witness then told of being introduced to Senator Brown by her uncle and of afterwards coming to know him quite well while she was secretary of the Republican Committee. The acquaintance continued to ripen, but when Mrs. Bradley was asked to give the story of this relationship, she fell into tears and appeared for a time quite unable to proceed. When she did open her lips no one heard her except the stenographer who stood at the desk before her. He interpreted her answer to be:

"The acquaintance grew into very intimate relations."

"It was many, many times."

"Did he make manifestations of love towards you?"

"Yes, many times."

"Did he at first manifest affection towards you?"

"Yes, many times."

"Tell the jury how strongly you loved him."

"I was beyond expression."

"Was a child born to you and him?"

"Yes, in February, 1929."

"Tell the jury how you came to enter into this relationship."

This inquiry brought out a long narrative which was so mingled with sobs and tears and told in such a low tone that the stenographer often was compelled to repeat the story which he did as follows:

"The Senator told me that he was very unhappy, very wretched. I had told him our relationship could only result in grief and sorrow and he replied that he would stay by me all his life, and when she had said: 'Darling, we are going on together all through life, so you can't avoid me, and I want you to have a son.'"

FINALLY CONSENTED.

"Finally after several months, I consented."

"Consented to what?" asked Mr. Powers.

"To his proposition."

"She said the son had been christened in Brown's surname and it had been given the Senator's name."

He had wanted to get a divorce and marry her, she said, but she would not consent to break up his home and had tried to break off the relationship, but he would not have it so and would frequently come to her and say she was the only bright spot in his life.

"Did you believe in his protestations of affection?"

"I didn't believe if possible for any one to do a worse thing than he did and not be fond of her."

Mrs. Bradley then told of the birth of her second child of a criminal operation which she said had been performed in 1901 by Mr. Brown himself, after which she was very ill for two weeks. Brown had written her as many as five letters a day, and she then loved him as deeply as it was possible to love.

Mrs. Bradley said she had agreed in 1901, that Mrs. Brown should get a divorce and marry her, and when she had given him his position, he had declared that he cared for nothing but her. She had gone to Grand Junction, Colo., in that year, she said, and notwithstanding the place was 200 miles from Salt Lake, the Senator came to her every few days. While they were at Grand Junction, Mrs. Bradley continued, Mrs. Brown had assured her that his arrangements for a divorce were progressing and that a compromise with Mrs. Brown had been agreed upon, and Mrs. Bradley said she had told him his property. He then gave a ring to Mrs. Bradley.

After the Grand Junction visit Mrs. Bradley said she came to Washington with Senator Brown and Alice Brown, the Senator's daughter by his first wife, who was only one year younger than herself. She traveled as Mrs. Brown, she said. Mr. Brown's bearing towards her had been courtly and loving.

VISITS LOS ANGELES.

On returning West, Mrs. Bradley, in 1902, went to Los Angeles, and soon returned to Salt Lake to go on the Senator's farm. She heard from him frequently during their separation. Brown had over and over reiterated his affection declaring whenever a divorce was mentioned that all obstacles would be swept away and that he would certainly become Mrs. Brown. He said, Mrs. Bradley declared, that he would do anything for her.

From the farm, Mrs. Bradley went to Pocatello and Shoshone, Idaho, in one of which places, she said, Brown had performed a second criminal operation on her when he again found she was about to become a mother. She had been very sick on the trip from Idaho back to Salt Lake and when she arrived in that city:

"That day," she continued, referring to a time soon after her arrival, "Mrs. Brown came to the room when Brown told her he would get a divorce and the very next day Brown came to Mrs.

Bradley's house and told her she should procure a divorce, adding he would then make everything all right. At last he said:

"If I do not marry you then may God avenge me."

FEELINGS CHANGED.

Mr. Brown's daughter, Alice, came to visit her father and the latter seemed decidedly hostile toward Mrs. Bradley. He persuaded her to go away, and in February following, she went to Orderville, where she remained for as long as I live.

Mrs. Bradley said her health gradually failed. She was to have been married June 2, but the Senator was ill then and she only talked with him over the telephone. Mrs. Bradley told her, saying he would "throw everything else down for her."

"I simply broke down and urged him to marry me," she said.

"I told him I could never face the children when they grew up, and I felt as if the future was very dark."

Tears streamed down Mrs. Bradley's cheeks.

"I was very disconsolate," she continued, "but the following day Brown got Bradlee told me that he would not do it, I will myself get one. I will marry Mrs. Bradley; I will stand by her."

Mrs. Bradley then told of her arrest, together with Mr. Brown, on the charge of adultery. She told of a visit to her by her pastor, Rev. Dr. Titter, who urged her to sever her relations with Brown, but the latter dissuaded her, saying he would "throw everything else down for her."

Mrs. Bradley declared that Brown repeatedly said to her: "Don't be led away from me by what any one says to you."

Relating the particulars of a second arrest in Salt Lake in 1902, Mrs. Bradley said that Brown vehemently repudiated the efforts of a third party to make a financial arrangement with her. Mrs. Bradley told of the Senator's presenting her with a revolver in Pocatello in 1907.

"He told me," she said in a mere whisper, "that he had bought it for me to protect myself with from Mrs. Brown."

After that time Mrs. Bradley said she carried the weapon in a hand bag. She told of an encounter in the hotel at Pocatello with Mrs. Brown, whom she found sitting at the head of the stairway, when she said Mrs. Brown grabbed her and tried to take her into her room. Mrs. Bradley said that she told Mrs. Brown that she had no quarrel with her. That night she and Mrs. Brown and Alice Brown had an all-night conference at which it was arranged that the Browns be divorced.

REITERATED PLEDGES.

Resuming her narrative this afternoon, Mrs. Bradley told several times to Mrs. Brown's farm in Idaho and said Brown spent much time there with her. Once, in 1902, she suddenly left the farm and went to Salt Lake, on the charge in the papers that she had forsaken her and come back to her life.

Mrs. Baker made objections to the reference to the newspaper, but the court held it admissible, saying the entire testimony was intended only to show the effect on the prisoner's mind.

Mrs. Bradley said she did not see the Senator for a month. Then she appeared and asked why he had not allowed her to save herself before "sinking to the last depths of despair and degradation." He replied, she said, that he had only taken this course to get rid of the criminal prosecutions against them and that when they were at an end he would keep his pledge to marry her and protect her children.

Mrs. Bradley said she asked nothing more than that he acknowledge the children, but he replied that if he did so the result would be to send him to prison. She then told him that if he did not make the acknowledgment she would plead guilty at her trial as she afterward did. She said he had again promised to marry her within a year, when in 1904, in connection with Mrs. Brown's trial on the charge of adultery, she was summoned to appear against him and had refused to testify.

"I said to the judge," she continued, "that he was the father of my children and I could not testify against him."

Mrs. Bradley said that in 1906 Brown performed a third criminal operation on her with the result that she was very ill and greatly depressed and to a time soon after her arrival, "Mrs. Brown came to the room when Brown told her he would get a divorce and the very next day Brown came to Mrs.

Bradley's house and told her she should procure a divorce, adding he would then make everything all right. At last he said:

"If I do not marry you then may God avenge me."

Mrs. Bradley said that in 1906 Brown performed a third criminal operation on her with the result that she was very ill and greatly depressed and to a time soon after her arrival, "Mrs. Brown came to the room when Brown told her he would get a divorce and the very next day Brown came to Mrs.

Bradley's house and told her she should procure a divorce, adding he would then make everything all right. At last he said:

"If I do not marry you then may God avenge me."

FEELINGS CHANGED.

Mr. Brown's daughter, Alice, came to visit her father and the latter seemed decidedly hostile toward Mrs. Bradley. He persuaded her to go away, and in February following, she went to Orderville, where she remained for as long as I live.

Mrs. Bradley said her health gradually failed. She was to have been married June 2, but the Senator was ill then and she only talked with him over the telephone. Mrs. Bradley told her, saying he would "throw everything else down for her."

"I simply broke down and urged him to marry me," she said.

"I told him I could never face the children when they grew up, and I felt as if the future was very dark."

Tears streamed down Mrs. Bradley's cheeks.

"I was very disconsolate," she continued, "but the following day Brown got Bradlee told me that he would not do it, I will myself get one. I will marry Mrs. Bradley; I will stand by her."

Mrs. Bradley then told of her arrest, together with Mr. Brown, on the charge of adultery. She told of a visit to her by her pastor, Rev. Dr. Titter, who urged her to sever her relations with Brown, but the latter dissuaded her, saying he would "throw everything else down for her."

Mrs. Bradley declared that Brown repeatedly said to her: "Don't be led away from me by what any one says to you."

Relating the particulars of a second arrest in Salt Lake in 1902, Mrs. Bradley said that Brown vehemently repudiated the efforts of a third party to make a financial arrangement with her. Mrs. Bradley told of the Senator's presenting her with a revolver in Pocatello in 1907.

"He told me," she said in a mere whisper, "that he had bought it for me to protect myself with from Mrs. Brown."

After that time Mrs. Bradley said she carried the weapon in a hand bag. She told of an encounter in the hotel at Pocatello with Mrs. Brown, whom she found sitting at the head of the stairway, when she said Mrs. Brown grabbed her and tried to take her into her room. Mrs. Bradley said that she told Mrs. Brown that she had no quarrel with her. That night she and Mrs. Brown and Alice Brown had an all-night conference at which it was arranged that the Browns be divorced.

REITERATED PLEDGES.

Resuming her narrative this afternoon, Mrs. Bradley told several times to Mrs. Brown's farm in Idaho and said Brown spent much time there with her. Once, in 1902, she suddenly left the farm and went to Salt Lake, on the charge in the papers that she had forsaken her and come back to her life.

Mrs. Baker made objections to the reference to the newspaper, but the court held it admissible, saying the entire testimony was intended only to show the effect on the prisoner's mind.

Mrs. Bradley said she did not see the Senator for a month. Then she appeared and asked why he had not allowed her to save herself before "sinking to the last depths of despair and degradation." He replied, she said, that he had only taken this course to get rid of the criminal prosecutions against them and that when they were at an end he would keep his pledge to marry her and protect her children.

Mrs. Bradley said she asked nothing more than that he acknowledge the children, but he replied that if he did so the result would be to send him to prison. She then told him that if he did not make the acknowledgment she would plead guilty at her trial as she afterward did. She said he had again promised to marry her within a year, when in 1904, in connection with Mrs. Brown's trial on the charge of adultery, she was summoned to appear against him and had refused to testify.

"I said to the judge," she continued, "that he was the father of my children and I could not testify against him."

THE CITY IN BRIEF

Hold up!

NEWS AND BUSINESS.

Basis of Credit.

The Los Angeles Credit Men's Association will hold a banquet at Levy's tomorrow night. Rev. William Horace Day will give an address on "Character, the Basis of Credit."

Bishop Conaty to Speak.

Bishop Conaty has been secured as an additional speaker at the "conference dinner" of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association tomorrow night. There are a few dinner tickets remaining unsold which can be obtained at the rooms of the association.

To Represent Los Angeles.

President Stephens of the Chamber of Commerce has announced his appointments on the committee that is to represent the organization at the Rivers and Harbors Congress, to be held in Washington, D. C., December 4 to 6, as follows: William H. Murphy, George H. Maxwell and R. W. Gates.

William Murphy Arrives.

William Murphy, accompanied by Mrs. Murphy, one son and a daughter, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday morning, and are stopping for the time being at the home of Mrs. J. W. Josephine Holmes. Mr. Murphy's sister, on Cordova street, a delegation of friends and relatives were at the Santa Fe Station to meet them, and they had a cordial greeting to the city that will probably be their home for some time to come.

Two Horses Cremated.

Two horses were cremated and a barn destroyed by fire in the rear of No. 523 Maple avenue about 7:30 o'clock last night. The building belonged to H. E. Gaylor. The horses were valued at $200 and the loss on the barn is estimated at $400. The origin of the fire is unknown. When Gaylor discovered the fire he ran to the barn and attempted to get the animals out. The smoke was so dense, however, that he was unable to reach them.

Arrested on His Record.

George Berger, a convict, who served a twelve-year sentence in San Quentin for highway robbery committed in Oakland, was arrested yesterday on suspicion by Patrolman William Matukewitz. Berger, who answers to some extent the description of the tall robber who held up the "Hill River" saloon, Saturday night, was caught by the patrolman on South Spring street. He could give no satisfactory account of himself, admitted that he was not working for a living, and was taken to the Police Station until an investigation can be made.

Lectures for Homeless.

The stereopticon lectures given in Assembly Hall, Chamber of Commerce, each afternoon except Saturday and Sunday, attract a large number of visitors. The audiences are increasing so rapidly that the present hall is considered too small for the purpose. "I consider these illustrated lectures various sections of the state to be of great value," stated Secretary Wiggins yesterday. "The lectures are very instructive and the homeless are given a comprehensive idea of the localities represented." At the present time lectures are being given on Redlands, Hawaii, Stanislaus county, Sacramento Valley and Los Angeles county.

Route Burglars Twice.

Burglars entered the home of Mrs. William Mente, No. 1273 West Thirty-ninth street, Monday night, and after pilfering several hundred dollars' worth of plunder on the floor, were frightened away by the return of Mrs. Mente to her home. The family have a beautiful bungalow. Mrs. Mente is in San Francisco, and Mrs. Mente spends the evenings at the Bergman home, burglars entered the Mente home, securing entrance by using a jimmy on the east window. Mrs. Mente returned in time to scare them away, after they had pilfered their plunder on the floor, preparing to taking it away. The same thing occurred Monday night. Mrs. Bergman accompanying Mrs. Mente to her home just in time to frighten away the burglars.

Jews Raise Protest.

Object to Introduction of Bible as a Text-book in Public Schools

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.) CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The prospects of introducing the Bible as a text-book in the Chicago public schools received a double setback yesterday.

A protest against any such action was presented at the board rooms on behalf of 100,000 Chicago Jews. This was filed by Rabbi Sol and Schanfarbus, who said they represented 200 rabbis and their congregations. Dr. Stols formerly was a member of the Board of Education in this city. In commenting on this protest, President Schneider admitted frankly that the Committee on School Management is not likely to consider the admission of the Bible favorably at its next meeting.

"We are all opposed to the Bible as a text-book," he said. "There is no doubt about that. The Chicago schools lack a system of ethical teaching, but what we need is a standard of morality."

President Schneider left it to be inferred that the opposition of the committee extends to a book of biblical narratives submitted by the Chicago Women's Educational Union.

YAFF LEAVES VLADIVOSTOK.

SMELLS TO HEAVEN.

People Who Purchased Lots Near Fertilizer Plant Want It Moved.

The City Can Live There.

Dwellers in the western environs of the young city of Huntington Park yesterday presented a petition to the Board of Supervisors to have an alleged nuisance in their neighborhood suppressed. The establishment objected to be known as the Bradley Fertilizer Works, but, as the city grew out around it, the name was changed to the more euphonious one of "American Agricultural Chemical Company."

In their appeal to the board, the petitioners state it knows that the place smells just the same under the new name.

The petition alleges that dead animals, garbage and other things which breed evil odors are converted into fertilizer, and that the result is "injurious to the health and interferes with the comfortable enjoyment of life" of the residents in the neighborhood. The petitioners pray that the concern be compelled to move out, with all its odiferous stock in trade.

William E. Lankester, resident manager of the American Agricultural Chemical Company, filed an answer, in which he stated that the petition is "a gross and malicious libel" and that the company is "a law-abiding citizen" and "a valuable member of the community."

However, the claim is not up that the company is a nuisance. The Board of Supervisors, created the plant in 1894, at an enormous expense. At that time it was stated that the region was uninhabited, and only recently the plain about the works has been platted and sold as residence property.

The people who petitioned, it would seem, must have had very bad colds when they bought and built in the unpleasant neighborhood.

HONOLULU OFFICIAL MISSING.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Chicago detectives are searching for Dr. Fred K. Peck, an official of the Honolulu government, who is said to have disappeared while in Chicago November 5.

Dr. Peck was on his way from California to Germantown, W. Va., to visit his father, and stopped in Chicago on business. His friends have not heard of him since that time.

Dr. Peck is a man of the room of the new structure. There it stands today, a memory of the young and enthusiastic manhood of him who has now passed to his reward. About his ancient walls has grown up as years passed a unique pile that forms one of the most interesting homes in Burlington.

Mr. Perkins never permitted the tearing down of any portion of his home, but as the demand for space increased he added to the original structure first in one direction and then in another, until the dwelling took on much the style of a manor house. The building has always worn a dream of red brick towers, more popularly known as "box car" red. It is said that Mr. Perkins first painted his home that color because of his loyalty to the railroad system over which he presided.

Whether this is true or not, that color has ever been worn by the picturesque structure known as "The Apple Tree." Although unostentatious from the outside, the interior of the Perkins home is rich in adornment, and is one of the most interesting interiors in this region.

One of Mr. Perkins' pleasures was the simple pleasures of the olden days. He dearly loved the plain and sturdy stock of bloom, and his previsions about the home ran riot with them the summer through. He loved the unspoiled aspect of nature, too, and the broad acres stretching back from and about his home contain heavy-grasses of original forest. Fine cattle and horses found ample room for grazing and exercise in the pasture lands, and all are cared for with an affectionate hand.

Mr. Perkins was a Republican in his

Mr. Perkins was a Republican in his Political sentimentality was not in any sense a politician. His important business relations, both private and official, left him no time, even had he been so inclined, to participate in political conflicts. He remained faithful to his trust. The remarkable story of his life has been so often told and summed up in the statement that beginning before reaching his majority as a clerk at $20 a month, Mr. Perkins rose by his own efforts through all grades of his business to its head and became one of the most influential and wealthy citizens of Iowa.

Editorial Praise.

[From the Burlington Gazette, Nov. 9, 1907.]

"The people of Iowa are mourning this morning when the news spread that Charles Elliott Perkins, so long the head and front of the great Burlington system of railroads, had passed away from his summer home near Dooten, Mass."

"That Charles E. Perkins was a Burlington man; that the people of this city were proud to rejoice. He headed the great railroad system after the town of his adoption. Loyal, true and devoted alike to his country and his countrymen, he has been the greatest of all the factors that enabled the struggling village to grow, mainly to the credit of his personal enterprise and conditions."

"Mr. Perkins was eminently a student of the science of railroads. He was great questions that required careful judgment and unusual ability."

"Among the cherished friends of Perkins in Burlington were Charles Wellington Rand and wife, long residents of the Iowa city, the latter of whom now lives in Angeles with her children."
